Re: Ebbeskotte announces run for Senate

Woodstock, Georgia September 9, 2013 - Corporal Nicole Ebbeskotte, former Cherokee County Sheriff's Office Public Information Officer, has announced her plans to qualify to run for the recently vacated Georgia Senate seat formerly held by Barry Loudermilk, who resigned to run for U.S. Congress. Ms. Ebbeskotte, a 12-year resident of Cherokee County, served in the Sheriff's Office for seven years under current Sheriff Roger Garrison. Nicole holds a Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration and a Master's Degree in Conflict Management. She has served on the Cherokee Leadership Steering committee as well as the Board of Directors for the Cherokee County chapter of the Boys and Girls Club. She is currently working as an executive for a local property management company and plays a role in many community activities. Nicole is also a certified mediator and arbitrator.

Corporal Ebbeskotte was quoted recently as saying, "I have always enjoyed serving the citizens of Cherokee County. Now I want to broaden my service to the next level by representing the people in Senate District 14.

The election is November 5, 2013.
